Richmond's Dead & Buried

A documentary film directed by Christine Stoddard about the myths, legends, and realities of Richmond, Virginia's many cemeteries. Coming 2014—but only with your help! Please put Richmond's dead and buried on the map.

Some of Richmond's most compelling stories are written in bones and tombstones.

Richmond, Virginia is one of America's oldest European-settled cities. People have been living—and dying—here for centuries now. This is a place where American Indians, African slaves, Founding Fathers, and Civil War soldiers alike are buried. From Hollywood to Shockoe Hill to Evergreen, Richmond's cemeteries tell the tales of not just the Confederacy. They tell the tales of the English colonies, the Revolutionary War, Jim Crow, World War II, and more.

Richmond's Dead and Buried seeks to unveil these stories in a feature length documentary that tours some of the city's most prominent and most obscure graves. Interviews with historians and other scholars, as well as cemetery workers and volunteers, and ancestors of the deceased will round out this look into the past, present, and future of Richmond's cemeteries.
